

Biography Marieke H.J. Blom

Marieke Blom has been chief economist at ING in the Netherlands since 2014. Her Research team in Amsterdam analyses a broad range of economic issues: from monetary policy and the Dutch housing market to developments in specific sectors, sustainability and technology.

Marieke is a member of the board of the Royal Netherlands Economic Association (Koninklijke Vereniging voor de Staatshuishoudkunde, KVS) – the oldest association of economists in the world. She is also a member of the independent advisory committee of the National Growth Fund (Nationaal Groeifonds).

She regularly appears in the media.

Before joining ING, Marieke worked as a senior manager at 'De Argumentenfabriek' in Amsterdam. Prior to that, she was a political adviser to the Dutch Labour Party (PvdA). She started her career as a trainee and economist at ABN Amro in 1999.

Marieke holds a master's degree in monetary economics and wrote her thesis at the Research department of DNB, the Dutch central bank.

Marieke lives in Amsterdam with her husband and two daughters.
